NO ACTION ON GULFLIGHT BY WILSON TILL HE HAS ALL FACTS

WASHINGTON, May 4.—The United States has not yet formulated any policy regarding the torpedoing of the American steamship Gulflight, which resulted in the death of three of her crew and will not do so until the facts have been established from every angle, President Wilson told his cabinet today.

The President today stated that the case involving the drowning of Leon C. Thresher, when the British ship Patna was sunk by a German submarine, would be treated in conjunction with the Gulflight incident, and it is probable that all matters between the American and German governments regarding the war zone dilemma will be grouped together in whatever action is taken.

The chief executive would make no further comment on the Gulflight matter pending receipt of definite information. The facts now are being sought of the American consul at Plymouth and from the American embassy in Berlin. Ambassador Page at London has not yet reported on

Woman to Fly This Week in Astor Biplane

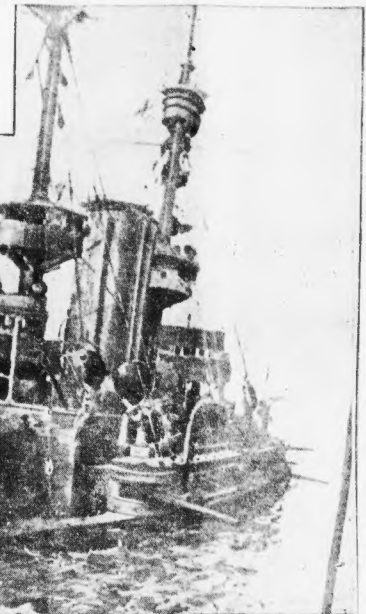

The Burgess biplane which is being used by the Burgess Aeroplane Company of Jacksonville for Vincent Astor's experiment, will be flown by Miss Astor, who was the first woman to fly in the new Astor machine, in the event of Mrs. Stirling Burgess's arrival.

Any diplomatic action of the United States very likely will be based on the treaty of 1874 between Prussia and the United States.

London First Officer Ralph E. Smith, formerly of Wakefield, and Albert Lee of East Boston, another Massachusetts man was in the Gulflight.

Elmer P. Butterworth, chief engineer, is the son of Mrs. Isabelle Butterworth and formerly lived in Hudson, Mass. He married Miss Fannie D. Barrill, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Barrill, six years ago.

THE BATTLESHIP IRRESISTIBLE SINKING IN THE DARDANELLES

This remarkable photograph was taken from the deck of one of the other allied warships during the bombardment of the Turkish forts on March 18. The British battleship Irresistible struck a floating mine and went down in deep water, her crew being rescued under a hot fire from the forts. POLICEMAN REAL HERO AT BLAZE

Policeman Laughlin of the Hanover street station was the hero today at a fire which broke out at the corner of 1,100th to the branch store of the Mercantile Produce Company, No. 13 Commerce street. Patrolman Laughlin captured two runaway horses at once and they were hitched to separate wagons.

When the horses bolted at the same time the wheels got locked and the pair of frightened animals turned down South Market street with the police officer in the lead. The crowd of onlookers, who were at least 2,000 men, women and children.

Policeman Laughlin sprang the nearest brake. He was dragged some distance before bystanders came to his assistance. The crowd applauded Laughlin for his quick action.

There was another rescue that occurred and played the crowd. Old Lady and Young Lady, two cats, mother and daughter, were rescued with their litter of kittens from the Mercantile Produce Company. At the time the whole upper floor of the building was in flames and the cats were pouring through the roof.

Three clerks, Morris Morris, George Morris and George Morris, caught the cats and their little ones, grouped for them and saved every one.

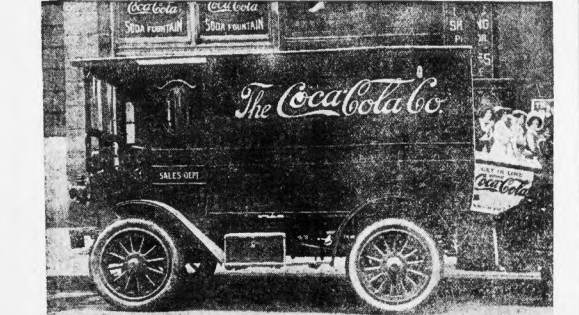

BOY HACKED TO DEATH, HUNT MAN

NEW YORK, May 4.—The police are seeking a "Jack, the Ripper," as the slayer of Charles Murray, four and a half years old, near his home on the lower East Side.

The child's mutilated body was found in the hallway of a house not far from the scene of the recent murder of Laurence Cohen, aged five. The Cohen girl's body, like that of the Murray boy, had been hacked with a knife. The murderer was never caught.

Charles Murray was being played in the yard back of his home twenty minutes before the crime was committed. The boy's six-year-old sister gave the police a description of a man, who she said, she saw hitting out of the hallway before the mother of the body. As in the Cohen case the murderer left no clue.
